

Opportunities in Nanomagnetism

S. D. Bader
Materials Science Division
Argonne National Laboratory
Argonne, IL 60439

Magnetism is one of the oldest fields in science but it is also at the forefront of the nanotechnology revolution. This talk draws on historical roots to provide a modern experimental perspective on recent issues and challenges in the field. Examples of how nanotechnology provides new strategies to realize composite magnetic materials with exceptional properties and interesting physics will be presented.